

If I were to make a choice between working in a small company or a big one, I would probably choose the latter. The simple reason behind my choice would be the opportunities that often appear in large companies. From workshops to bootcamps, there is always a number of activities meant to help both the employee and the employer.

Moreover, there is always a better range of promotions available in bigger companies and also a bigger chance to interact with people from different domains during the job.